ULISSE definition of “Willingness to learn”

Ability to learn from daily experiences and mistakes; proactivity in the search for continuous improvement; humble attitude towards people with more experience and knowledge; continuously update in the field of knowledge.

Why is it important for employers?

Employers need you to be able to learn new knowledge and skills to keep up and do a good job. Learning doesn't finish when you leave school. It's something you will do for the rest of your life. This is even more true in today's job market where everything changes at a speed never seen before and skills need to be constantly updated.

Highlights/

1

“ Take the time to learn something new: a new trail, a new skill, a different point of view, something that will push and progress and develop your talent. ”

Highlights/

2

“ Asking questions does not make you dumb. We don't know everything, and if we access to someone with real world experience why won't we ask him/her a question or two about what they know? ”

Tips

1. Ask questions, look for advice and analyze opinions
2. Read memories and life stories of successful people to learn from their experience
3. Don't be afraid of failures – make them a boost, incentive and motivation to learn further
4. Surround yourself with educated and inspiring people who will help you to acquire new knowledge
5. Avoid pride, arrogance and I-know-it-all syndrome to continue self-development
